Retail Market Report

The retail market has changed from a product-driven market to an entertainment-driven market. Let's use Magnolia Park and The Shops at Greenridge as examples. Greenridge was built in 2006 and Magnolia park was started shortly thereafter. However, Magnolia Park stalled out during the Great Recession and didn't hit its stride again until the beginning of 2014. Greenridge is a classic power center with eight or nine big box retailers plus small shop spaces and restaurants on the outparcels. Magnolia Park is a new power/entertainment center with a couple of big box retailers and eight or nine large, inline restaurants and some type of entertainment option.

This is further shown by the amount of new construction in our market. Over the past 34 years, the Greenville/Spartanburg market has delivered an average of 1,000,000 SF of new space a year. In the last eight years, we have delivered an average of 462,000 SF per year. Some of that can be attributed to the Great Recession, but during that same eight-year stretch the Greenville/Spartanburg market grew at a rate of about 2% per year which, over that time, means we added about 100,000 additional consumers to the market. So our growth is not stagnant like the rust belt. I believe a consumer shift is happening—the consumer is looking for entertainment, food and services when they go out rather than products which was the case through the early 2000s. This means that we don't need as much product in the marketplace; the big boxes are still growing, but the growth is in their web sales more so than the bricks and mortar and as a population we still like to eat and be entertained.

Lowes Foods Opens New Grocery Store in Greer

By Trevor Anderson | Upstate Business Journal | September 29, 2016

Winston-Salem, NC-based grocery store chain Lowes Foods celebrated the grand opening of its new store in Greer on Friday.

The 58,000-square-foot store is at the Riverside Crossing shopping center at the intersection of Suber Road and Hammett Bridge Road across the street from Riverside High School.

"We are thrilled to share our new Greer store with the entire Greenville community," said Tim Lowe, president of Lowes Foods, in a statement. "It represents the latest addition in our journey to completely reimagine the grocery shopping experience and inspire guests. Our commitment includes offering produce sourced through our partnership with more than 200 local farmers and featuring a wide assortment of unique local products found throughout the store."

The family-owned company broke ground on the store in July 2015. At the time, the grocery chain said it is the first store it hopes to open across Greenville County and the Upstate.

Lowe said construction is continuing on Lowes Foods' second location in the area at the Village Market-East shopping center on the northwest corner of Woodruff Road and Sunnydale Drive in the Five Forks area of Simpsonville.

The Greer store features a plethora of special concepts called Lowes Foods Originals, including its Chicken Kitchen, Sausage Works, Pick & Prep, The Beer Den, The Cakery, Boxcar Coffee & Chocolates, Breadcrumb bakery, Smokehouse and the Community Table.

It also will have a wide assortment of organic foods, premium aged beef, bulk foods, fresh pizza and paninis, and prepared foods. Customers can take advantage of Lowes Foods-to-Go, an online personal shopping service, and a loyalty program offering price discounts and fuel rewards.

"As a fellow Carolinas-based business, Elevation is very excited to bring the first Lowes Foods to the Greenville Market," said Christopher La

Mack, principal at Elevation Real Estate Group, the owner and developer of Riverside Crossing, in a statement. "We know the excitement surrounding this opening has been building for several months, and we believe this store will be very successful and wish Lowes Foods every success."

Elevation said the store will soon be accompanied at the $12.3 million shopping center by an Elizabeth Todd Hair Salon, Lee Spa Nails and Madi Boutique, a women's apparel and gift store. All of those stores are expected to open in the next 60 days.

La Mack said the company is in negotiations with a local Asian restaurant and a national fitness facility that could spur an additional 9,600 square feet of development at the center. He said the shopping center has also received interest from two major medical providers and national, regional and local restaurant operators.
